

TARUMITRA CENTRE

For Ecology

Loyola School, Jamshedpur

Tarumitra is a nationwide students' organization which promotes ecological sensitivity in India. It has been campaigning and sensitizing various sections of society on ecological issues. The U. N. has conferred a Special Consultative Status to Tarumitra from 2005.

During the past two years, Loyola School has taken multiple steps in creating awareness about the need to conserve the environment and save planet Earth.

Our students are taken to the Centre on a regular basis where they bond with Mother Nature and enjoy a stint of experiential learning. This learning thus becomes a part of their project work in Biology.

Needless to say, projects such as these require considerable financial investment. The approximate cost estimate of the construction and furnishing will be around Rs. 16 Crores

Earnest attempts are being made to raise funds. So, we seek your kind patronage too. Contributions will be exempt u/s 80 G of the Income Tax Act. Corporates can contribute through their CSR funds too for which appropriate CSR Receipts will be issued. Cheques may be made in favour of "Loyola Jamshedpur".

Our school is envisaging a Tarumitra Centre, a Biodiversity Park, at Mango on the banks of Subarnarekha River, with a residential facility for groups of students to spend their weekends meaningfully to equip themselves with knowledge and experience on ecology and nature. The centre will be able to accommodate about 100 students at a time with their staff mentors for weekend workshops. The construction work has already begun in full swing, with the hope that with the support of the parents of our students, we shall succeed in its completion in 18 months.
